Pickle Club

BY FREDERIC J. HASKIN
Director
Janesville Daily Gazette Information
Bureau, Washington, D. C.

Chicago, July 23.—Chicago's Bohemian quarter is small but intense. Unlike Greenwich village in New York, it has not yet been made self-conscious by literary exploitation or turned into a circus for the amusement of the "gilded Philistine."

The heart and center of this co. bohemian is the famous "Dill Pickles" club in Tooke place. Tooke place is a paved alley, which is entered at one end by way of a crack about 14 inches wide between two high buildings. The bricks on either side of this narrow way have taken on a high polish from nightly contact with the embonpoint of the supercultured.

The Dill Pickles club, though it is a place of mystery, is a place of light and guiding spirit, who has the appearance of a poet and the name of Jones, says he don't know what it is, Jones, says he don't know what it is, Jones, says he don't know what it is. Its physical habitat is two long narrow rooms, one above the other. The lower floor is furnished with kitchen chairs and tables, painted bright blue with a yellow border. The walls are covered with paintings, sketches, cartoons, and newspaper clippings. There is a piano at one end and a cookstove at the other. The upper floor is an auditorium with chairs and a raised platform. The club has two meetings a week which anyone may attend, and anyone may also throw a quarter into a cigar box. These quarters go to the upkeep of the club and presumably to that of Jones.

Poets Read Their Verses.
One of the weekly meetings of the D. P. is literary. At these sessions poets may hear their own verses or of somebody else's. The other meeting, which takes place Sunday and is much more popular, might be described as a meeting of the "Dill Pickles" club. The poets, who are all sorts of seers of the esoteric, the exotic and particularly the erotic, hold forth in the Dill Pickles club on the Sabbath.

This Bohemian organization seems to be all things to all people. The police watch it as a hangout of radicals, but it is not on record that they have ever raided the place or caught anything dangerous there. Perhaps, like other people, they have got the Dill Pickles habit. Connoisseurs of art and letters go there to meet celebrities and hunt for new talents. The rightous and the respectable regard it as a den of strange vices and resort to it surreptitiously in search of thrills. You can find anything there, politically from a professing anarchist, who never tried to explode anything more dangerous than a theory, to a shocked and horrified conservative. There are all types intelligently from an unmitigated bohemian to an acknowledged genius, and everything in the social (that is, the financial) scale, from fashionable women who come in taxicabs to factory girls and tourist poets.

They All Go There.
Among those present at one gathering were a novelist who has recently achieved a national reputation, a poet of an hour and a little working girl with a hard paint and a soft voice selling pamphlets about the Mooney case, and a gifted musician who is a renegade from the Christian faith. A large part of sympathy and attention is made up of joyously irresponsible youths not far past 20, with their collars and their mouths wide open, full of wit and outbursts of intellectual license like spring lambs in a pasture.

The atmosphere of the Dill Pickles club is delightfully tolerant and eclectic. No matter what you are, you can walk in and stay as long as you please. You can take your hat off or keep it on, just as you please. You can sit on a chair or on a table or on the floor, whichever you prefer. If you leave your coat and necktie at home, you will not be conspicuous for that reason. No one will make you uncomfortable by staring at you. On the other hand, you will find that you are being introduced on any subject and be sure of getting a reply if not an argument. Poets and postesses will read you their works, artists will take you their pictures, and actors will expound you his soul.

The lion and the great man of the Dill Pickles club is S. Szukalski, an artist, painter, poet, and composer. He has become a legend. He is a Pole, 24 years old, in person he is lithe, straight, and muscular. He wears his hair down to his shoulders, a broad leather collar, and a high-collared shirt. He has high cheek bones and aquiline features he looks at a little distance surprisingly like a Navajo Indian.

His Work Is of Merit.
His appearance might lead you to think Szukalski as a mere eccentric, you would be making a mistake. His work is of high and acknowledged merit. He has been a model for artists and a model for a genius in the newspapers. His work has even been reproduced in popular magazines. He is witty, epigrammatic and as sharp and logical as a corporation lawyer.

Szukalski has smashed all the rules of art that have obtained for five thousand years. He never works from models, but draws and sculpts the images and ideas in his own mind. He says that models kill originality. He has several pupils whom he teaches by his method, and some of them do good work. He has been a model for artists and a model for a genius in the newspapers. His work has even been reproduced in popular magazines. He is witty, epigrammatic and as sharp and logical as a corporation lawyer.

EXPEDITION INTO SOUTHERN REPUBLIC CAUSED ANTI-AMERICANISM.

BANKER TELLS OF RELATIONS

Widow Of Victim Of Murder Bandits Is On House Wives Stand.

Washington, July 23.—William B. Mitchell, former manager of the Bank of London in Mexico city, told the house committee today that the sending of two American military expeditions into Mexico and their subsequent withdrawal is largely responsible for the anti-American feeling in the southern republic. The committee is considering a resolution authorizing investigation of the relations between the two countries.

Do you think that the feeling against Americans was strengthened by the belief that America or its people were afraid to assert their rights? asked a member of the committee.

WAR-TIME DRY LAW IS UPHELD IN COURT

New York, July 24.—Constitutionality of the war-time prohibition act was upheld in an opinion handed down by Federal Judge Thomas L. Chatfield, Brooklyn, in a test case against Stephen A. Milner, a saloonkeeper, brought by the liquor dealers' association. The case was argued before Judge Chatfield's decision was based on testimony he heard recently in New Haven where he sat in the place of Federal Judge E. S. Thomas of Connecticut. Milner, backed by the Connecticut liquor men, to test the validity of the law, opened a saloon in Meriden. He was arraigned on the charge that on or about July 7, last, he had knowingly violated the prohibition law by serving liquor before the conclusion of the present war and before the termination of demobilization, the date of which is to be determined by the president.

BOY AND TEAM UNHURT IN CRASH WITH TRAIN

Clinton, July 23.—A collision with a train which completely demolished the farm wagon and its load of milk, but from which the youthful driver and the team of horses escaped unscathed, occurred just on the edge of town here yesterday morning.

Even the Prisoners Strike; Want Better Eats

PRESIDENT WILSON KEEPS MUM ON REPORT

SENATORS STATE BELIEF THAT IT WAS ONLY WAY TO WIN OVER JAPANESE.

LIST OF CALLERS IS EXHAUSTED

Peace Documents Prepared For Consideration in Congress.

Paris, July 23.—The Japanese delegation to the peace conference today issued a denial of assertions that the Shantung settlement in the German peace treaty was in exchange for the withdrawal of the Japanese contention regarding the naval base in the League of Nations covenant.

No Comment Made

Washington, July 23.—Inquiry at the White House today concerning published reports that the Shantung provision of the peace treaty was President Wilson's personal solution of the peace problem brought only the statement that no comment would be made.

Senators who have discussed the Shantung provision with the president stated, however, that they had not been given to understand the president's position as a solution of the problem, but that he had found himself unable to convert the Japanese delegates to any other view.

The senators said they had been told Premier Clemenceau and George represented to the president that they were bound by the agreements of their governments with Japan and that if the Japanese statesmen were to be converted to any other views, the president himself would have to undertake the attempt. It was futile, the senators said they were told.

President Wilson Has Been Devoting

Senator Sterling, South Dakota, said neither he nor the president mentioned the Shantung settlement. The discussion article of the League of Nations covenant, referring to protection of nations against "external aggression" and the question of referring to the withdrawal of nations from the league.

FRANCE OFFERS TO TAKE OVER U. S. MILITARY PROPERTY

Paris, Tuesday, July 22.—France will offer to take over American military property in France, consisting mainly of docks, railways and real estate, at one-fifth its cost to the Americans, according to a statement given to the Associated Press today by Louis Morel, under-secretary of state for the liquidation of stocks. Mr. Morel said that what seemed to be a new offer of reality is likely because much of the military construction will be of little value in peace time and much of the property, such as railway equipment was designed for a use different from that required for French operation.

English Troops Moved into Coal Strike Area

London, July 23.—Troops were moved today into the Yorkshire area affected by the coal strike. Mr. Eric Geddes, the government's representative, explained that the move was for the protection of the mine pumps in operation.

LEAGUE OPPONENTS ARE REACTIONARIES SAYS SEN. M'KELLAR

Washington, July 23.—The league of nations was supported in the senate today by Senator McKellar, democrat, Tennessee, as one of the greatest forward steps in the nation's history. Most of the opposition, he asserted, came from "reactionaries" of the same school as those who opposed the federal constitution and those who later handicapped the growth and development of the country.

FORD NEEDED HIS SON; COULDN'T GO TO WAR

St. Clemens, Mich., July 23.—According to the testimony of Henry Ford today, his son, Edsel, wished to go to war but was dissuaded by his father who said he was a great aid to him in his work.

Fists, Clubs, Knives Used in Race Riots

Washington, July 23.—Sporadic firing in some negro districts continued until early this morning, but the major casualties in last night's clashes between whites and negroes, reports show, consisted of only one who was killed and another probably fatally wounded.

WORLD TRADE ROUTES ARE OPENED

Washington, July 23.—Trade routes reaching every quarter of the globe have been established by the shipping board as part of its program of converting the new American merchant marine fleet from war to peace work.

They Took Him for Sure Enough Moonshiner

Huntington, West Va., July 23.—Seized by a gang of alleged moonshiners, brought before a Greenbrier county justice of peace and found guilty on a charge of bootlegging, was the experience of H. E. Ratliff, Hinton, W. Va., a state prohibition officer who returned last yesterday from an investigation tour into the hills.

MOONEY DID NOT RECEIVE JUSTICE, SAYS U. S. OFFICIAL

Washington, July 23.—Thomas J. Mooney did not receive full justice in his trial at San Francisco for alleged connection with the Preparedness day bomb explosion, according to a report by John B. Densmore, former special agent of the department of justice who investigated the case for the government. The report, dated November 1, 1918, was submitted to the house today in response to a resolution.

LONG TIME CREDITS BILL ACTION DEFERRED

Washington, July 23.—Opposition by Senator Gronna, republican, North Dakota, caused the senate banking committee to defer action today on the bill of Senator Edge, republican, New Jersey, authorizing the organization of a "every vital spot" of reconstruction problems and had been approved by the federal reserve board.

Father of Golfing in America Died at Home

Boston.—Samuel MacDonald, known as the "father" of golf in America, died at his home in Brighton, Mass., on December 16, 1896. MacDonald went to Franklin park with George Wright, Fred Mansfield and B. E. E. Mitchell and played the first game of golf in America. A few days later MacDonald played a golf match with several friends on Revere beach while the tide was out.

News Notes from Movieland

BY DAISY DEAN

Elinor Fair and Albert Ray in a scene from one of their newest pictures.

That every one may laugh heartily at least once a week is one of the best reasons for the fair-play films which are produced by William Fox. The "funny stuff" and the love-story, which Albert Ray and Elinor Fair, who give their audiences, in case you do not know them yet, for they have only been radiating cheerfulness for a few months, meet them just the right age to portray sentiment and fun for the tired business man and his family.

Another thing may be said of this team, they surely put Mr. Fox in a better light than any of his other stars whose plays are always full of the sordid part of life and full of scantily clothed vampires who can not act and who leave the well-known dark brown taste after the last flicker.

In "Words and Music By—" "Be a Little Sport," and "Married in haste," Albert Ray and Elinor Fair have spread a new and pretty co-star, called "contagious cheerfulness," have caught audiences in the grip of laughter and held them there. These pictures have set forth clearly the standard for Ray and Fair of clean, snappy comedy, full of ginger and rapidly—comedy that brings the smile and the laugh and at the same time is hung on the golden thread of romance.

FIFTY FOUR ELSIE: A beautiful cretonned dressing room, dozens of vases of reception flowers, a brand new Japanese make-up box with a personal card of well wishes from Myron Selznick, did not help very much toward making Elsie a happy girl last week.

It was her first day in the 175th street studio and although it was indeed a surprise at the pleasant impression this one made, her morbidly was far from being ousted.

"I'll sell my motion picture interests to any man," said Elsie with the weeps in her voice, "for a nickel."

Her depression was enough to touch the most sophisticated of reporters' souls. She was huddled on the stage. Her big eyes clouded with tears.

For all the world one could not help but forget the air of festivity that pervaded the room, when a really confounding one was this forlorn aspect of misery.

"What's the matter?" intimated Elsie, quivering as we did, "what's the matter?"

"Good Lord, look what they've done to me!"

For the little folks to go home, they danced many kinds of dances. Some of the children were too young to really dance, of course, and they just hopped about, but they had a good time. He did the first time he saw the ball.

When the children finally left the castle and climbed into the wagons, the king and queen gave each one of them a large bundle to take home to their mothers. These packages contained large slices of cake and other goodies left over from the party.

Jack and Jane and Jean were so tired when the party was over that they could hardly stand up. You probably have been tired that way, too, after having had an awfully good time, but they didn't forget to tell the king and queen before they went to bed what a wonderful time they had, and that they would always remember the party and the good times they had at the castle long after they were grown up.

The next morning the children were surprised to see Captain Bravo busy with his airplane. He was giving it up and laying in new supplies. When the children later found Ladydear packing up their clothes, they decided that Captain Bravo must be preparing to leave the castle. Sure enough, while they were eating lunch, the captain said:

"Well, little folks, I think we have stayed about as long as we ought to be at the castle. The king and queen have been awfully kind to all of us and we don't want to make our visit so long that they will grow tired of us."

Of course, the king and queen said they never would. But Captain Bravo insisted that they ought to go and added, "Along about the time the sun is going down today we will climb into the airplane and start for—"

But I can't tell you until tomorrow where Captain Bravo told the children they were going.

Miss Rose Rothenberg.

The self-made man who had been invited to this party by his fellow citizens and friends will have to step aside from now on and let the self-made woman have her day and incidentally her due. There is a young woman in New York City whose record to date equals that of many self-made men and is very unusual among women. She is Miss Rose Rothenberg who was recently appointed a deputy assistant district attorney. Miss Rothenberg is the first woman to be appointed to that position in New York. She is particularly capable of understanding the problems with which she has to deal since she won her education by attending night school while she worked during the day. Though a Eurasian by birth, Miss Rothenberg has lived in this country since she was seven. She is now but twenty-six years old.

"I always wanted to be a lawyer," Miss Rothenberg explained, "and through my own experience it has been clear to me that under present economic conditions where girls are compelled to be out at all hours of the night they should have protection and I shall attempt to give it to them to the best of my ability."

"It seemed to me that the place where I could do the most good would be as assistant to the district attorney in the women's court. I don't know how I happened to be the fortunate applicant, but since I am, I shall do everything in my power to help, particularly to help first offenders, both boys and girls."

"I believe strongly in recreational centers, in fact, in my opinion they are absolutely necessary. They keep boys and girls out of mischief."

"Whatever record I may make I hope it will not be built up on convictions," she went on. "The object of the district attorney is not alone to prosecute and convict but to administer justice."

"This attitude may lose me my job," she said laughing, "but I will take the chance. I wish it understood, however, that I shall not proceed on the theory that every one is innocent."

"If I am convinced of a girl's guilt she shall be convicted. If I believe in her innocence I feel that it will be carrying out my duty to protect her."

"I am quite determined to insist on corroborative evidence and I shall not let any woman be convicted upon her past record."

WOMEN AS MANAGERS: Out of the 11,000,000 women who are engaged in gainful occupations in this country, there are fully a million who occupy managerial positions. Already the message of the National Federation of Business Women to the business and professional women of this country is having a most gratifying result.

Now that they have started to organize the business and professional women, they will do it as efficiently and thoroughly as they have organized all groups, beginning with the church social.

The message of unity has already drawn together such groups as the Association of Women of Commerce, of the United States of America, of which Miss Florence King of Chicago is the head, the All-Asia club, and the National Committee of Business Women, of which Miss Lena Madsen Phillips of New York is the executive secretary. These groups meeting together at the St. Louis convention, are working toward a larger and more complete reorganization and will stand together for the things that are necessary for the progress of business and professional women.

HERE AND THERE: Over 50 percent of the workers in the Philadelphia candy factories are women. Sixty-five percent of the Cuban women can wear only dresses of the "stout class."

MOVING PICTURE FUNNIES: "Isn't it too bad boys aren't built specially for base ball for base ball season?"

Base ball grounds. "I wish to climb the wishing plane."

FORTY YEARS AGO

Janesville Daily Gazette, July 23, 1879.—The first Methodist church will hold a social tonight at the home of Samuel Wright.

The Misses Myra Bliss and Maude Hemming have gone to Milwaukee to visit friends for a time.

S. Holdrege and family left today for Lake Geneva, where they will camp for two or three weeks at Porter's landing.

A daughter was born to Mr. and Mrs. Charles Atwood last night.

The excursion train to Madison today under the auspices of the Temple of Honor numbered six cars. They were all filled with passengers and not the members of the temple. The Bower City band accompanied the excursion.

Next Friday there is to be a lawn party at the residence of Mrs. F. H. Judd. The Guards will be present in full dress uniform. The Bower City band will enliven the occasion with music. A large platform has been built for dancing and Anderson's full orchestra will be on hand.

Madison, Jeffries is getting along quite comfortably, considering the injuries he received yesterday and the terrible shock to his nervous system. He passed a rather restless night, his bruises are such that he can hardly move a muscle without pain, but his symptoms are nevertheless favorable and he will probably recover in due time. At the inquest held today it was decided that the engineer running the train that killed Nathaniel Case was not to blame and that the accident was unavoidable on his part. The jury was made up of the following: J. F. Driver, E. L. Helmstreet, M. W. Pierson, W. B. Britton, H. B. Walker and James B. Hume.

The Magnificent Ambersons

By BOOTH TARKINGTON

Copyright by Doubleday, Page & Co.

"Yes, she lives with us. That's our house just beyond grandfather's." He waved a sealskin gauntlet to indicate the house Major Amberson had built for Isabel as a wedding gift. He frowned as they passed a closed carriage and pair. The body of this comfortable vehicle sagged slightly to one side; the paint was old and seamed with hundreds of minute cracks like little rivers on a black map; the coachman, a fat and elderly dandy, seemed to drowse upon the box; but the open window afforded the occupants of the cutter a glimpse of a tired, fine old face, a silk hat, a pearl tie and an astrachan collar, evidently out to take the air.

"There's your grandfather now," said Lucy.

George's frown was not relaxed. "Yes, it is; and he ought to give that rat trap away and sell those old horses. They're a disgrace, all shaggy—not even clipped. I suppose he doesn't notice it—people get awful funny when they get old; they seem to lose their self-respect, sort of."

"He seemed a real Brummell to me," she said.

"There's Your Grandfather Now," Said Lucy.

that's the way my grandfather ought to keep it. He lets these people take too many liberties; they do anything they want to."

"But how could he stop them?" Lucy asked, surely with reason. "If he sold them the land it's theirs, isn't it?"

George remained serene in the face of this apparently difficult question. "He ought to have all the tradespeople boycott the families that sell part of their yards that way. All he'd have to do would be to tell the tradespeople they wouldn't get any more orders from the family if they didn't do it."

"From the family? What family?"

"Our family," said George, unperturbed. "The Ambersons."

"I see," she murmured, and evidently she did see something that he did not, for, as she lifted her muff to her face he asked:

"What are you laughing at now?"

"Why?"

"You always seem to have some little secret of your own to get happy over."

"Always!" she exclaimed. "What a big word, when we only met last night!"

"That's another case of it," he said, with obvious sincerity. "One of the reasons I don't like you—much—is you've got that way of seeming quietly superior to everybody else."

"I!" she cried. "I have?"

"Oh, you think you keep it sort of confidential to yourself, but it's plain enough! I don't believe in that kind of thing. I think the world's like this: there's a few people that their birth and position, and so on, puts them at the top, and they ought to treat each other entirely as equals." His voice betrayed a little emotion as he added, "I wouldn't speak like this to everybody."

"You mean you're confiding your deepest creed—or code, what ever it is—to me?"

"Go on, make fun of it, then!" George said bitterly. "You do think you're terribly clever! It makes me tired!"

"Well, as you don't like my seeming 'quietly superior,' after this I'll be noisily superior," she returned cheerfully.

"We aim to please!"

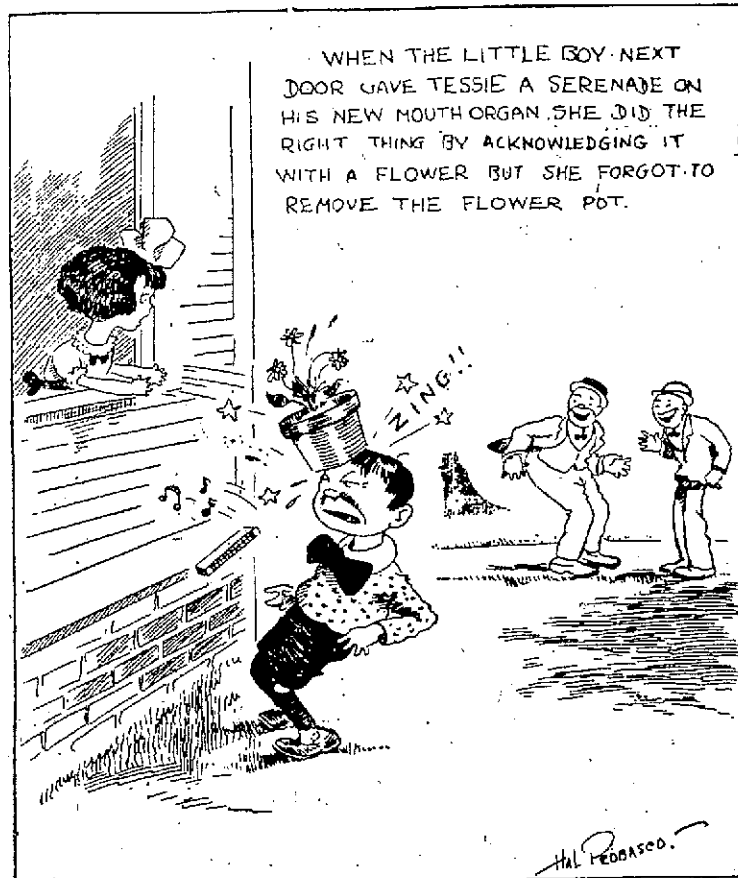

"I had a notion before I came for you today, that we were going to quarrel," he said.

"No, we won't; it takes two!" She laughed and waved her muff toward a new house, not quite completed, standing in a field upon their right. They had passed beyond Amberson addition and were leaving the northern fringes of the town for the open country.

"Isn't that a beautiful house!" she exclaimed. "Papa and I call it our Beautiful House."

TERRIBLE TESSIE

By Probasco.

George was not pleased. "Does it belong to you?"

"Of course not! Papa brought me out here the other day, driving in his machine, and we both loved it. It's so spacious and dignified and plain."

"Yes, it's plain enough!" George grunted.

"Yet it's lovely; the gray-green roof and shutters give just enough color, with the trees, for the long white walls. It seems to be the finest house I've seen in this part of the country."

George was outraged by an enthusiasm so ignorant—not ten minutes ago they had passed the Amberson mansion. "Is that a sample of your taste in architecture?" he asked.

"Yes, why?"

"Because it strikes me you better go somewhere and study the subject a little!"

Lucy looked puzzled. "What makes you have so much feeling about it? Have I offended you?"

"Offended?" nothing. "Girls usually think they know it all as soon as they've learned to dance and dress and flirt a little. They never know anything about things like architecture, for instance. That house was about as built a house as any house I ever saw!"

He spoke of it in the past tense, because they had now left it far behind them—a human habit of curious significance. "It was like a house meant for a street in the city. What kind of a house was that for people of any taste to build out here in the country?"

"But papa says it's built that way on purpose. There are a lot of other houses being built in this direction, and papa says the city's coming out this way; and in a year or two that house will be right in town."

"It was a bum house, anyhow," said George crossly. "I don't even know the people that are building it. They say a lot of riffraff come to town every year nowadays and there's other riffraff that have always lived here, and have made a little money, and act as if they owned the place. Uncle Sydney was talking about it yesterday; he says he and some of his friends are organizing a country club, and already some of these riffraff are working into it—people he never heard of at all! Anyhow I guess it's pretty clear you don't know a great deal about architecture."

She demonstrated the completeness of her amiability by laughing. "I'll know something about the north pole before long," she said, "if we keep going much farther in this direction!"

At this he was remorseful. "All right; we'll turn and drive south awhile till you get warmed up again. I expect we have been going against the wind about long enough. Indeed, I'm sorry!"

He said, "Indeed, I'm sorry," in a nice way, and looked very strikingly handsome when he said it, she thought. No doubt it is true that there is more rejoicing in heaven over one sinner repented than over all the saints who consistently remain holy, and the rare, sudden gentleness of arrogant people have infinitely more effect than the continual gentleness of gentle people. Arrogance turned gentle melts the heart; and Lucy gave her companion a little sidelong, sunny nod of acknowledgment. George was dazzled by the quick glow of her eyes, and found himself at a loss for something to say.

Having turned about he kept his horse to a walk, and at this gait the sleighbells tinkled but intermittently. The snow no longer fell, and far ahead, in a grayish cloud that lay upon the land, was the town.

Dinner Stories

Two men, who are quite well off, but very miserly in their expenditures, met recently in the gallery of a theater. Each was annoyed to be seen by the other in the cheapest place of the house.

"What brings you here?" each asked the other.

"I've got a fearful cold in my head, and as the heat ascends, I came up here where it was warm."

Besides, I'm a terrible sufferer from rheumatism. But what brings you here?"

"My opera glasses!"

"Your opera glasses?—Yes, they enlarge too much. I can't see from the boxes what is going on on the stage. I have to come up here in the gallery to be able to see with them at all."

Cornelius Vanderbilt told a curious story at Newport the other day. "At the Grand Central station," he said, "one young man was seeing another off, when three pretty girls got into the Pullman."

The departing young man was smitten by the three girls' charms.

"Look here, to oblige me, you know, won't you put your head in at the door just as the train pulls out and shout in a loud voice: 'Then I'll close the Fifth avenue house, sir, and store the silver on the yacht.'"

The other chap agreed to do this, and the one smitten with the girls sat and waited for the thing to come to pass, his eyes fixed on their pretty faces.

"Finally the whistle blew. The obliging chap outside hopped up on the back platform, stuck his head in at the door and yelled:

"Hey, you, tell your boss if that suit of mine ain't home Saturday night I won't have it at all!"

LIMA

Mr. and Mrs. S. J. McConnell gave a party in honor of their hired man, Saturday evening.

Ed. Koszycaresk has rented the Peterson farm and will move in October.

The officers of the local insurance company went to Johnston, Saturday on account of the fire on the premises of W. J. Hall. Barn and contents burned at a loss of $2,200, partially covered by insurance.

Mrs. Millard is entertaining her mother, Mrs. Mewe, Orfordville, this week.

Mrs. Charles Knowles is visiting in the Knowles home here while Charley is working in Rockford.

Mrs. O. Johnson is entertaining a friend, Mrs. Spickerman, Milwaukee.

AFTON

Afton, July 22.—Miss Mary Sprecher has returned home after a year's absence in Akron, Ohio.

C. H. Griffin and George Otis attended the funeral of A. C. Powers last Saturday, held at his late home in the town of Beloit.

Miss Julia Spawn, Dewitt, Iowa, is visiting her grandmother, Mrs. Elsie Kendig, for a few days this week.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Eldredge, Mrs. Hattie Stone, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Jackson and Esther Jackson, all of Beloit, were callers here Saturday.

Elizabeth Burner came home from Elgin, where she was visiting. Miss Clara Beckman accompanied her home for a week's visit.

Frances Engleke has gone to Beloit for a short visit with her sister, Mrs. Forto Edwards.

YOU NEED NOT SUFFER FROM CATARRH

But You Must Drive It Out of Your Blood.

Catarrh is annoying enough when it chokes up your nostrils and air passages, causing difficult breathing and other discomforts. Real danger comes when it reaches down into your lungs.

This is why you should at once realize the importance of the proper treatment, and lose no time experimenting with worthless remedies which touch only the surface.

To be rid of Catarrh, you must drive the disease germs out of your blood.

Splendid results have been reported from the use of S. S. S., which completely routs from your blood the Catarrh germs, for which it is a perfect antidote.

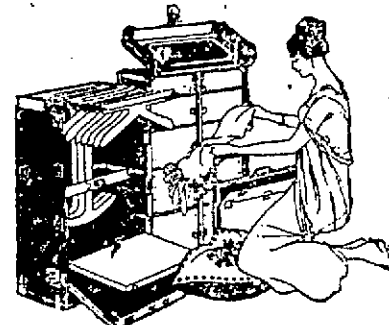

If you wish medical advice as to the treatment of your own individual case, write to Chief Medical Adviser, 42 Swift Specific Co., Atlanta, Ga.

ENGLAND'S MOTH PLAGUE.—London.—Much damage has been done to fruit trees in Nottingham by the ermine moth. Many trees have been denuded of practically all their fruit, and all remedial measures failed.

YANKEE FISH.—Jersey City, N. J., A fish of the goldfish breed with a red body, white fins and a blue streak on its back has been produced by Frank W. Hedden, a member of the Hudson County Aquarium Society. Mr. Hedden says his Yankee fish is a cross between a fish that had a red scaled Japan and a transparent scaled Japan.

"Gee-Whiz! How it Hurts!"

—The Pain in My Foot!

"Sometimes it is in my arm. Merciful Heaven, how my back hurts in the morning!" It's all due to an overabundance of that poison called uric acid. The kidneys are not able to get rid of it. Such conditions you can readily overcome, and prolong life by taking the advice of Dr. Pierce, which is "Keep the kidneys in good order."

"Avoid too much meat, alcohol or tea. Drink plenty of pure water, preferably hot water, before meals, and drive the uric acid out of the system by taking Anuric." This can be obtained at almost any drug store.

Send a bottle of water to the chemist at Dr. Pierce's Invalids' Hotel, Buffalo, N. Y., and you will receive free medical advice as to whether the kidneys are affected. When your kidneys get sluggish and clog, you suffer from backache, sick-headache, dizzy spells, or twinges and pains of lumbago, rheumatism or gout; or sleep is disturbed two or three times a night, take heed, before too late. Get Anuric (anti-uric-acid), for it will put new life into your kidneys and your entire system. Ask your nearest druggist for it or send Dr. Pierce ten cents for trial package.

Blackhawks-Janes Game Will Be Played For High Stakes

By George McManus.

LOSERS TO FORFEIT USE OF GROUNDS FOR SEASON

They have changed their minds, those two managers, Murphy and Doran. The Lawrence Lunch-Janes-Blackhawks game will be played at the fair grounds Sunday afternoon as originally scheduled, under terms drastic enough to draw out a pack of grandstand and to develop the full playing strength of both teams. Side-bet of $200 will be put a side attraction to the main feature of the game—the winner to have the use of the fair grounds diamond the balance of the season.

The signed agreement reached by the managers after a long session last night and brought into the Gazette for inspection today follows:

"Game to be played Sunday, July 27, 1919 by players named by managers today as per lists below. Winning team to pay all expenses including war tax and to have use of fair grounds for the balance of the 1919 season. Three balls to be furnished by each team."

Lists of players:

JANES: Bond, Miller, Plence, Corns, Kakusko, Viney, Dopp, Chouke, Sals, Lengquist.

BLACKHAWKS: Meyer, Riley, Doran, Sullivan, T. Butters, L. Plence, L. Butters, Smith, Britt, Jackson, W. Plence, Clatworthy.

Blackhawks to be allowed to use any pitcher not included in list. (Signed) James Doran.

It is evident from the terms agreed upon that both managers are cocksure of victory and players of both nines feel the same way. The Hawks are of the opinion that if they get a new pitcher with lots of stuff, they can back him up in the field and with the stick in big enough form to push across enough runs for a victory. They are pinned on the ability of Sam Lengquist to tame the slugging Hawks.

The only agreement on which manager Murphy would play the game was that the winning team was to have the use of the fair grounds every Sunday until the close of the season. Under terms of an agreement reached early in the season, the Hawks and the Janes were to alternate, using the grounds, but this arrangement was found to be entirely unsatisfactory by Murphy, who discovered it was impossible to play out-of-town games every two weeks at anything but a good-sized financial loss.

If he can secure the use of the grounds every Sunday he says he will then be able, with the new support the Janes now have, to bring Chicago teams here and to arrange a series with the Beloit Fairies in September. Such teams as the Albany Parks, Key-stone A. C., Senecas, and Giants, all of Chicago, the Stockholders of Oshkosh, McCoy's All-Stars of Milwaukee with Ed. Walsh, and the Duluth Northerners are anxious to play in Janesville if they can be assured a proper guarantee. The Murphy says he will be able to do it if he gets the full lease on the diamond the remainder of the year.

GREYS WILL INVADE ORFORDVILLE, SUNDAY

The Janesville Greys will play Orfordville at Orfordville next Sunday. The two teams have played a number of times in the past and a good game is assured. Orfordville has several footville rangers signed for the game with Haggard just home from overseas in the box. Jimmie Fullerton former Red Sox star will play with the Greys, Sunday. J. Eastman will pitch, with V. Eastman and Timpany ready to relieve him.

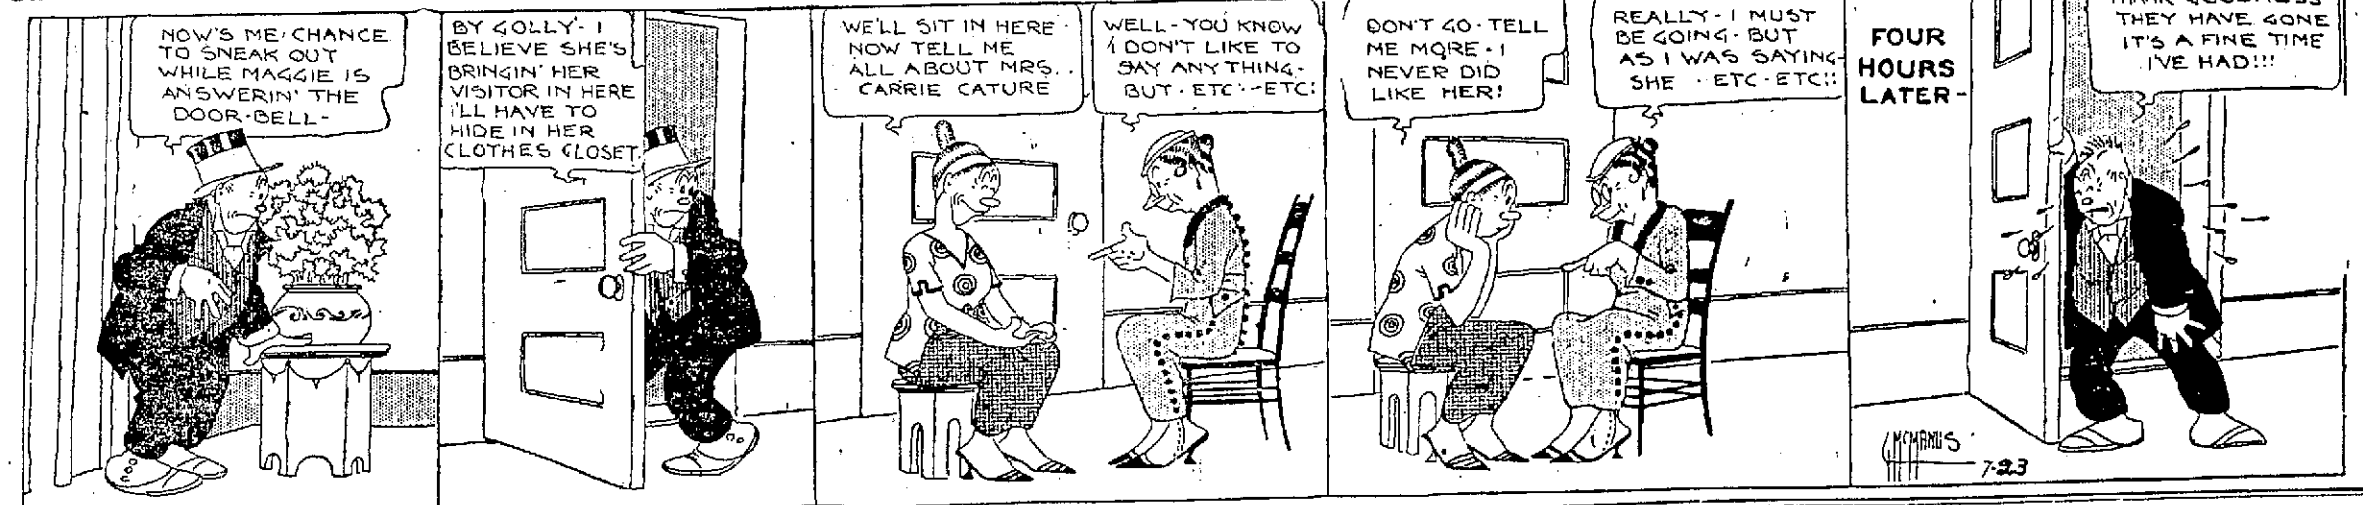

The lineup: Prox, cf, Vobian ss, Schilling 2b, Cutler c, Fullerton lf, V. Eastman rf, Foley 3b, J. Eastman p, Timpany p.

SAMSONS ARE RULED WINNERS OVER STARS

Behind by two runs in the last of the seventh inning and with darkness rapidly approaching and acting upon the advice of three or four noisy spectators, the All-Stars threw up the sponge in their game with the Samsons Tractors last evening and as a result the game was declared a forfeit by the umpire with the Samsons the winners. It was at first agreed to play a five-inning game. At the end of the fifth stanza the score stood 3 all, so it was decided to keep going two more innings.

The All-Stars forged ahead in the sixth inning, but in the last half of the seventh the tractor makers got to Bayo. Bick for several hits and grabbed off the lead. According to spectators the Stars then began to stall in the middle of the inning waiting for darkness to prevent continuance. Marko on first took several minutes to fix his glove, and then Ted Hager had to tie his shoe string. Numerous other stunts were pulled with the hope of having the score revert back to the sixth inning when the Stars were ahead and thus give them the game. After the ire of the Samson crowd had been aroused by these actions, Umpire Murphy finally declared the tractor gang winners.

The game was the first of a scheduled three-game twilight series.

Doctor Tells How to Detect Harmful Effects of Tobacco Try These SIMPLE TESTS

New York: Doctor Connor, formerly of Johns Hopkins hospital, says: Many men who smoke, chew or sniff tobacco, and who are generally healthy are suffering from progressive organic ailments. Thousands of them could not have been cured if they had not been for the use of tobacco, and thousands would soon get well if they would only give up the habit. The chief habit-forming principle of tobacco is nicotine, a deadly poison which, when absorbed by the system, slowly affects the nervous mechanism, the brain and vital organs of the body. The harmful effect of tobacco varies and depends on circumstances. One will be afflicted with general debility, others with catarrh of the throat, indigestion, constipation, extreme nervousness, sleeplessness, loss of memory, lack of will power, mental confusion, etc. Others may suffer from heart disease, bronchial trouble, hardening of the arteries, tuberculosis, blindness or even cancer of the common affliction known as tobacco heart. If you use tobacco in any form you can easily detect the harmful effects by making the following simple tests. Read aloud one full page from a book. In the course of reading your voice becomes muffled, hoarse and indistinct, and you find it difficult to read. Next, the throat is affected by catarrh and it may be the beginning of more serious trouble. Next in the morning before taking your usual smoke, walk up three flights of stairs at a regular

"I LET HIM HAVE THIS RIGHT, FIRST," JACK TELLS BOYS

Jack Dempsey, telling group at Cincinnati how he dropped Willard. It's all very interesting to read how Jack Dempsey, a big boy himself, won the heavyweight championship, but the average boy would much rather hear the story from Jack's own lips. These boys above—including the one who's still a lad though he's probably a daddy—are in the seventh heaven as Jack tells how his first real blow was a right to Willard's heart and his next a left to Willard's jaw. These two blows put Willard in a daze, from which he couldn't recover.

SPORT SNAP-SHOTS

BY JACK KEENE.

Jack Coombs, who recently retired from baseball after a brief and very unsatisfactory fling as manager of the Philadelphia club, may return to the game as a manager. From the Quaker City comes a well founded report that Colby Jack has $100,000 of his own to invest in the National league club in that city, and that he may head a syndicate to buy the franchise under which William F. Baker is now operating.

Coombs first made it known that he sought to obtain a financial interest in the club immediately after he was disposed by Baker to make room for Gavy Cravath. He told a number of his friends that not only would he put $100,000 into the club, but that he would strengthen the Phillies and make them pennant contenders. At the time little heed was paid to Coombs' remarks, but a day or two later Baker was approached by a person who said he represented a syndicate that was willing to pay $350,000 for the controlling interest in the club, and the fact that Coombs had set that figure as the value of the club at this time led many to believe that it was he who inspired this offer.

There are 5,000 shares of stock in the club outstanding at present, the par value of a share being $100. In view of the fact that the club is badly shot to pieces in a baseball sense at this time Coombs declared that a share is worth only $50 in his opinion, and that $350,000 was a very fair price for the club.

Baker admitted that he had received an offer from a syndicate, but intimated that he had spurned it. Furthermore, he does not seem to think that Coombs is a member of the clique which opened negotiations with him.

"Jack is a careful person, and I think that all his talk about being willing to go into a syndicate to purchase the club was idle conversation," said Baker.

"The Phillies are not for sale. If any one comes along with $750,000 he can buy the club, but it is not on the market. The talk of dissatisfaction among the stockholders is all bunk, and even if it were not I control the club and will continue to do so for the next two years."

It is not unlikely that Coombs has the amount he mentions. He has been in baseball for thirteen years and always commanded a good salary. Furthermore, he is a shrewd fellow and his money has been well invested, so that his business ventures probably have netted him as much as his ball playing. He is financially a success last fall. When Coombs was considering Baker's offer of the management of the Phillies he expressed his feelings in the matter as follows: "There is only one factor which might impel me to return to the game. I will re-enter baseball only if I think that by so doing I can help in any way to restore the game to its pre-war basis. I owe a great debt to baseball, for baseball has given me all that I have today. When I left college and became a professional ball player I didn't have a cent. Now I am comfortably fixed and the foundation of the little pile I have consists of my baseball earnings. There is nothing more for me to gain in the game, but in this period of reconstruction it is the duty of every baseball player to plunge in and help put the old game back where it belongs."

SIGN TO-DAY Your Building Contract

WE NEED houses, apartments, stores, schools and public buildings in this city and we need them at once! We're suffering without them.

Women are trudging the streets day after day, looking for a place to live at any price—and they can't find it. Real estate offices and rental agencies throw their hands in the air—"There's nothing listed," they say. "What can we do?"

Unless we begin to build in this city at once, this is going to be an undesirable place to locate. We'll drive business away. We'll all feel it.

SINCE the armistice was signed, everyone has waited for building prices to slump—they've settled a little, and now they're stabilizing probably for years to come. They're not high in comparison with other prices—they'll hold for years. Every week the business condition of the nation grows more strained—bankers tell us to get our money into circulation or we'll have stagnation. The Government says we must start to build and buy at once.

Big rentals and demand for improved property makes building profitable just now. Let's get co-operation. You help the other fellow and he'll help you. The nation needs business, the city needs buildings, industry pleads for contracts. Your building project is the keystone. Start today!
